OVERSLEPT, HE SAYS; NOW GOING TO AYER WITH COP AS GUARD

Two drafted men were taken to Ayer, Mass., yesterday morning by Detective James Curry. They had been inmates of the county jail for several days. Fred Gonther, 25, 117 Maple street, who was supposed to leave with the contingent from the depot yesterday, appeared at police headquarters and said he had overslept and missed his train. Gonther was taken to Asst. Supt. Buckley's office and will be sent to Ayer accompanied by the policeman, whose train expenses he must pay as well his own. Gonther said he had told his landlady the night before to awake him early yesterday morning but she neglected to do so. He belongs in division five.

A contingent of American civilian physicians arrived at London.

ABDUL HAMID, "THE DAMNED"

Shrouded in true Oriental mystery is the fate of Abdul Hamid II, "the Damned," who ruled over the Turkish Empire until his overthrow by the Young Turk party and who was sent into exile, and was last seen at Salonica, where, under strict guard, he occupied a house looking out upon the sea. From time to time during the three years of his exile that preceded the outbreak of the war in Europe, strange stories of Abdul Hamid came to the world. The stories were told, in the newspapers, in magazines, and then the world promptly forgot. The "Unspeaking One," if he is alive today, is, in a manner of speaking, celebrating his seventy-fifth birthday, having been born on Sept. 21, 1842. For years his mind has been toppling on the brink of madness, and has kept himself isolated in his palaces, in constant fear of assassins. An English journalist who was permitted to visit him in exile in 1912 described him as "the unhappiest man in the world."

His fear of assassination grew after he was shipped from Constantinople to the Villa Abidin at Salonica. He refused to go near a window or door, for fear of being shot by an enemy. He rarely sleeps through the night and can be heard working away with hammer and saw, as carpentering is his only pastime. Such was the condition of the Sultan when last heard of. As newspapers have always been withheld from him, it is possible that even today he does not know that the world is plunged in war. If he is still in Salonica he is, of course, wondering what is the significance of the thousands of troops in that port. Only two of his numerous wives accompanied Abdul Hamid into exile. When he was the despot of Turkey his wives were supposed to number about 200, but shortly after his dethronement no less than 746 women applied for pensions as ex-wives of the Sultan.

Among the others who should be sunk without leaving any traces are some of our pro-German politicians.
